DROPPED DEAD THIS MORNING

Friends of Joseph Holden Shocked to Hear of his Sudden Death

PIONEER OF RUSH COUNTY

Deceased was Feeling Well Yesterday but Died Shortly after Arising Today

The many friends of Joseph Holman were shocked this morning when the sad news went over the county that the aged pioneer of Rush county had died suddenly at the home of his son, Lot Holden, in Noble township. Mr. Holman was feeling very well yesterday and slept well during the night. He got up this morning and the family who were in the other room heard a noise about 7 o'clock and going to see the cause found the aged man breathing his last, where he had fallen.

Mr. Holman was one of the pioneers of Rush county, having been born in this county shortly after it was organized. He was a member of the Methodist Protestant church at New Salem, and was a devout Christian. He was always referred to as the "model of Noble township."

Mr. Holman is survived by three sons, John, Edward and Lot Holman, all of whom live in Noble township; also three sisters, two of whom are unmarried, and Mrs. John Meyers. His wife preceded him to the other shore a number of years ago.

The funeral services will be held at the M. P. church in New Salem, Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Burial will occur at East Hill cemetery.

CHARLES PERKINS SALE OF LIVERY STOCK WAS GOOD

The Charles Perkins sale at his livery barn in East Second street, attracted a large crowd this afternoon and good prices prevailed.

TOM DAVIDSON ON "PUBLIC SALES"

Tom Davidson, of Greensburg, candidate for congress, and one of the big guns too, who was here yesterday and today in the interest of his candidacy, said: "Say, don't you know that a wise farmer holds his public sales during campaign years and in the spring. Why? I tell you. They draw better at that time than a free church bazaar run by a lot of pretty girls, and once you get the crowd, the auctioneer can usually work up enthusiasm which brings high prices. Actually, people become so enthused that they will give first price and ten per cent for an old article. I make all the public sales I can, for there I meet many of the delegates, and it saves me many long drives. But the poor delegate! Did you ever stop to think about him? Between the candidates and the auctioneer, he gets electioneered and auctioneered so much that he hardly finds time to eat the free lunch served at noon."

BIG CROP OF ROOT DOES NOT EXCEL OUR OWN SEL WEBBS

A North Carolina grower of ginseng root has harvested from a plot sixty-seven by fifty feet, $980 worth of root, nearly all of which was sent to China. This record does not "excel" our own Sel Webb, who will mine a big crop next year that will be like picking dollar bills off the bushes.

HORSE WAS KITTENISH AND KICKED M'GRAW

Fairview Man Sustained Painful
Injury to His Left Ankle
Last Night

While leading a horse to the watering trough at his place near Fairview last evening, Charles McGraw was painfully injured, the animal becoming "playful" kicked him on the left ankle. Fortunately his ankle was not broken.

FORMER ACTOR TO SPEAK HERE

Talented Orator will Address the Men's Big Meeting on Next Sunday

HAS UNIQUE DISTINCTION

Rev. Earl Wilfley Spoke Four Times at the Monster Sunday
Meetings in Indianapolis

Those who attend the Men's Big Meeting at the St. Paul's M. E. church on next Sunday afternoon will enjoy a rare treat, which is seldom enjoyed in a city the size of Rushville.

The committee has secured Earl Wilfley, of Crawfordsville, who has addressed the Men's Big Y. M. C. A. meetings at English's opera house in Indianapolis four times.

The fact that he was called back four times to speak at the monster meetings in the Capitol city, bespeaks his ability as a platform orator and lecturer.

Mr. Wilfley was a former actor and his gestures and refined eloquence holds his listeners in wrapt attention.

On next Sunday afternoon he will address the Men's Big Meeting at St. Paul's M. E. church on "Shorn Samsons," one of his most famous lectures and every man in this city and county should be present and hear him.

The male chorus and orchestra have an excellent musical program prepared which is always one of the features of these meetings.

Every man in Rushville and Rush county is cordially invited to attend these meetings which are free and which are creating a great influence for good in this community.

Rushville is one of the few, if not the only small city in the country that has been able to hold meetings of this character, attracting from seven hundred to one thousand men at each one. The newspapers of the State declare the movement here is little short of marvelous.

GRAND JURY ADJOURNS UNTIL NEXT TUESDAY

After a strenuous session of many days the nature of which is not given out to the public, the grand jury adjourned today until next Tuesday, when they will again go in behind closed doors to finish their task.

—Miss Elizabeth Bishop has gone to Connersville to spend a few days with her sister before leaving for Indianapolis, where she will make her home with Mr. and Mrs. W. F. McCloud. Miss Bishop is one of Rushville's most estimable young ladies and leaves many friends in this city.

The "set off" suit of Commodore Westerfield vs. Robert J. Westerfield, which was tried in Squire James Smart's court at Manilla, has been appealed to the Rush circuit court. The suit was filed today.

THE CRY OF FIRE SET UP ON SHIP

Caused Consternation Among the Passengers—Mrs. Pearl
Tyner was Aboard

OFTEN VISIT IN THIS CITY

Talented Greenfield Woman
Writes of Her Experience in Foreign Lands and Water

Mrs. Pearl Tyner, of Greenfield, who often visits Mrs. Thomas Scanlan, in West Third street here, and who is now abroad, writes interestingly of her trip. She is a talented writer and occasionally does a magazine work. The Greenfield Star says:

In a letter to a friend in this city Mrs. Pearl Tyner relates that her trip across the Aegean Sea, from Italy to Greece, was through a rough and angry sea, but she had a more exciting experience when she left Greece for Smyrna and Constantinople, for at three o'clock a. m., the first day out, the cry of "fire" was raised, which caused much alarm, but further investigation showed that the ship had sprung a leak and the pumping machinery refused to work. The ship floated helplessly upon the waters until day break, and was finally drifted back to the point from where it started, where the passengers were removed to small boats and taken ashore at Athens.

On the day the letter was written, Feb. 5, she went to Mar's Hill and stood upon the exact spot where Paul the apostle stood and preached to the intellectual Athenians, "The Unknown God."

PHONED TO STOP RUNAWAY HORSES

Novel Means Employed to Stop
Runaway Team on Country
Road

Walter Heeb, who is moving from Glenwood to his farm near Fairview, was unloading a wagon filled with furniture yesterday evening, when one of the horses became frightened, causing the team to run away.

W. J. Durbin saw them pass his house in their mad flight, scattering furniture "all along the way," and telephoned to the Fairview store for one of the "minute men" to rush into the road and stop them at the crossing. His command was carried out to a letter and the team brought to a halt at the old cross roads. No damage was done only to the roads.

WILLIS CONTINUES TO DRAW CROWDS

Revival Services at First Presbyterian Church Largely Attended Each Night

Evangelist Willis preached to a large crowd last night at the First Presbyterian church on "Running the Blockade." Much interest was manifested in the meeting. The revival services will continue this week beginning each night at 7:30 o'clock. Special music. Everybody welcome.

The funeral services of Mr. D. M. Kirkwood, who died very suddenly at his home in Carthage, Wednesday morning, will be held at the Christian church at Carthage, Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Burial will occur at the Carthage cemetery.

WANT TO KNOW ABOUT THE ROADS

Postal Department is Securing Reports from the Many Rural Carriers

PURPOSE OF THE PLAN

Information and Statistics will be Used as an Argument for Service

Rushville rural carriers have been called upon by the department to furnish statistics concerning the roads their routes traverse and they are busy getting information, some of which is almost inaccessible to them.

The blanks they are required to fill out ask the number of miles of private and public roads on their routes, the condition of the roads, the condition of the bridges, whether the weeds along the roads are cut, whether a grader is used, whether the road officials are prompt in attending to their duties, how much money has been spent on the maintenance of the road since the route was established, the name of the road officials, what improvements are contemplated and whether the farm values have increased since the establishment of the route.

This information is to be used by the postal department in its report and will tend to show the advantages of the service. Each carrier is desirous of making as good a report as possible, although the time of the year makes the roads appear at their worst.

DEPAUW GLEE CLUB TO COME IN MARCH

Talented Musical Organization of Eighteen Members will be Here in Concert

Rushville music lovers have a rare treat in store for them, for the DePauw University Glee club is coming here for a concert on the night of Wednesday, March 25th. In the organization are eighteen talented musicians, and he reader and violin virtuoso who accompany the glee club are said to be artists of the first rank. They will appear in concert at St. Paul's M. E. church.

FORMER RUSHVILLE RESIDENT BURIED

At Knightstown Yesterday—One
Time Conducted a Dry Goods
Store Here

Elisha B. Holloway, who was buried at Knightstown yesterday, was a former citizen and dry goods merchant in this city. He left here with his family in 1876 and moved to Indianapolis, where he died Monday at the advanced age of 85 years.

He came from Ohio in young manhood and married Miss Josephine Worster, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Worster, of this county.

His first wife was a sister to Mrs. Caroline Hackleman and Mrs. James Patterson. His only son, Dr. O. E. Holloway, lives in Knightstown, where the remains were interred.

THE WEATHER

Fair tonight and probably Friday
Rising temperature Friday.

EVANGELIST WILLIS WILL TALK TO CHILDREN

Will Give Illustrated Lecture on Boy Who Broke the Ten Commandments

Evangelist Willis will give an illustrated lecture tomorrow (Friday) evening at the First Presbyterian church immediately after school to the school children of this city.

The lecture is to be entitled "The Boy Who Broke the Ten Commandments," and ought to be heard by every child in this city.

The talk will be undenominational and parents are asked to send their boys and girls to hear Mr. Willis.

MAN ARRESTED SAID TO BE A SCOUT

And Rode the Plains Under
"Buffalo Bill"—Acting in a Mysterious Manner

This morning about one o'clock, Officer Pea found a man acting in a mysterious manner in West First street near the Big Four station, and he placed him under arrest. The fellow claimed to be an old Pinkerton detective and said he rode the plains as a United States deputy marshal under Col. William Cody (Buffalo Bill). He was about 55 years of age and seemed to be a man above average intelligence. Pea lodged the fellow in jail and he was released this morning. He gave his name as Ves. Heaton, and claims Kokomo as his residence.

MASONS HAD A BIG TIME LAST NIGHT

Several Out-of-town Guests were Present and Responded to Toasts

The banquet, reception and exemplification of the Royal and Select Master degree at the Masonic temple last evening was an elaborate fraternal affair and was enjoyed by many out-of-town guests.

The lodges of Indianapolis, Morristown, New Palestine, Greenfield and Shelbyville were represented. Among the out-of-town visitors who responded to toasts were Frank Bass, George W. Kirk and Mr. Showalter, of Shelbyville.

Seventy-seven candidates received the R. & S. M. degree, after which followed an elaborate banquet served by the Misses McCoy.

Rev. Roscoe Smith, pastor of Little Flatrock Christian church, returned from Worthington today and tells an interesting story of a giant sycamore tree which stands two miles south of that city in Green county. It is fifty-two feet in circumference and seventeen feet in diameter, being the largest tree outside those giants in California and Wyoming. The tree is near the White river, and for many years its great limbs and shaded branches has been a favorite rendezvous for the boys who love to roam and linger along the river in the good old summer time. Consequently many names and initials have been carved on the trunk of the tree, some up near the top fifty or sixty feet from the ground. Many of the initials have swollen and grown out, embossed by the sands of time.

Dr. J. G. Lewis has received a letter from John F. Mollree, formerly fireman at the I. & C. power house, and who has accepted a civil service position at Washington, D. C., as an engineer, and he states that he is well satisfied and will soon move his family to that city.

SILLY GOOSE IS LAYING FOR HIM

Watson Says "Why Throw
Stones at the Goose that Lays the Golden Eggs"

GAINS STRENGTH DAILY

Attacks Make by Socialistic and Democratic Demagogues are Reacting in "Our Favor"

The attack some of the labor demagogues made on the Watson candidacy is proving a boomerang and is acting every day in Watson's favor. To begin with it was a Democratic move for they feared to have Watson head the Republican State ticket, appreciating that it would be the death knell to Democracy in Indiana for four years.

As soon as it was learned that the attacks were without one iota of truth and were built on the sands, then did the Republican labormen, who heretofore were neutral—and some there were who were for other candidates—enlisted on "our side" and began to champion the Watson cause. In this manner, many who had no choice gladly mounted the Watson band wagon and followed the merry crowd.

One enthusiastic Watson follower in Indianapolis openly declared that he believed the Sixth district Congressman, knowing he had a clean record in labor matters as well as everything else, instigated and had the labor attacks agitated, appreciating that he would come out head and shoulders above all suspicion of a doubt following an investigation, and that he would be the gainer thereby. Of course there is no truth in such a statement.

In speaking of Watson being at Logansport last Saturday, the Logansport Reporter says in part:

"James E. Watson, Republican candidate for nomination as governor, spoke to a large crowd in the court house Saturday. O. P. Smith of this city, has been stumping the State in the interest of organized labor speaking against Watson. Asked whether or not he would reply to Smith, Watson exclaimed: 'Why throw stones at the goose that lays the golden egg. Smith has done me more good than harm. At every place he has spoken I have secured a solid delegation.'"

OUR HALF MINUTE SERMONETTES

Young man, if you want to succeed do not hang around the loafing places nearly every night in the week till the midnight hour. By the company you keep you are known. Take the young man who seeks out older persons as his associates, he profits by their knowledge and experience. Keep away from loafing places. The reading of good books is as good a pastime as any you can find.

Sometimes a boy works harder to keep from working than he would have to work were he really trying to do his duty. He would be of much more benefit to his employer if he were up and doing for the good of the business in which he is engaged, besides he would not have the continual worry of mind in the strenuous effort to avoid being caught idle than it is to work. It is really harder and more strenuous to be idle than it is to work conscientiously and honestly. During your idle moments is when the devil draws full pay.

Nowadays when a man falls in love with another man's wife, that's affinity, but when another man falls in love with your wife that's—different. If you stand on the street corner and make ugly remarks about some other man's daughter, that's fun, but when it happens to be your girl, that's scandal. So it is all along the line. It makes a lot of difference whose wife or daughter it is, and which way you peel the bark. Ever think about it?

Habitual Constipation

May be permanently overcome by proper personal efforts with the assistance of the one truly beneficial laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, which enables one to form regular habits daily so that assistance to nature may be gradually dispensed with when no longer needed as the best of remedies, when required, are to assist nature and not to supplant the natural functions, which must depend ultimately upon proper nourishment, proper efforts, and right living generally. ## WILL BE NO LET UP

THE PRESIDENT'S POLICY OF

Washington, Feb. 27.—That there will be no let-up in President Roosevelt's policy of warring "against rotteness and corruption" was emphatically declared by the president in an address to the delegates to the department of superintendence of the National Educational association during their reception at the White House. Continuing, the president gave his views on educational methods at considerable length, and with characteristic catholicity of thought and vigor of expression.

"Of all the bodies of citizens that I have received here at the White House," said the president, "there is none that occupies a more important relation than yours—I am tempted to say none has come that occupied as important a relation to the nation, because you men and women who deal with education, who represent the great American policy of education for all children, bear a relation to the future of our whole people such as no other like number of individuals can bear. I own six of the children that you educate, and I am prepared to extend cordial sympathy to some of you. Seriously, friends, it is idle for any man to talk of despairing of the future of this country or feeling unduly alarmed about it, if he will come in contact with you here and with the forces that you represent. Fundamentally this country is sound; morally no less than physically. Fundamentally, in its family life and in the outside activities of its individuals, the country is better and not worse than it formerly was. This does not mean that we are to be excused if we fall to war against rotteness and corruption, if we fail to contend effectively with the forces of evil; and they waste their time who ask me to withhold my hand from dealing therewith. But it is worth while to smite the wrong for the very reason that we are confident that the right will ultimately prevail. More than anything else I want to see the public school turn out the boy and girl who when man and woman will add to the sum of good citizenship of the nation. It is not my province, nor would it be within my capacity, to speak about your pedagogic problems. You yourselves are far better able to discuss them. But as a layman let me say one or two things about your work. In the first place I trust that more and more our people will see to it that the schools train toward and not away from the farm and the workshop. We have spoken a great deal about the dignity of labor in this country; but we have not acted up to our spoken words, for in our education we have tended to proceed upon the assumption that the educated man was to be educated away from and not toward labor. We, too, in our turn must show that we understand the law which decrees that a people which loses physical address invariably deteriorates; so that people shall understand that the great carpenter, the good blacksmith, the good mechanic, the good farmer, really do fill the most important positions in our land; and that it is an evil thing for them and the nation to have their sons and daughters forsake the work which if well and efficiently performed means more than any other work for our people as a whole.

"One thing that I would have you teach your pupils is that whether you call the money gained salary or wages does not make any real difference, and that if by working hard with your hands you get more than if you work with your head only, it does not do at once to call the smaller amount salary. The term 'dignity of labor' implies that manual labor is as dignified as mental labor, as of course it is. Indeed, the highest kind of labor is that which makes demands upon the qualities of both head and hand, of heart, brains and body.

"We need to have a certain readjustment of values in this country which must primarily come through the efforts of just you men and women here and the men and women like you throughout this land.

"I would not have you preach an impossible ideal; for if you preach an ideal that is impossible you tend to make your pupils believe that no ideals are possible, and therefore you tend to do them that worst of wrongs—to teach them to divorce preaching from practice, to divorce the ideal that they in the abstract admire from the practical good after which they strive. Teach the boy and girl that their business is to earn their own livelihood; teach the boy that he is to be the home-maker; the girl that she must ultimately be the home-keeper; that the work of the father is to be the bread-winner, and that of the mother the housekeeper; that their work is the most important work by far in the land. The work of the statesman, the writer, the captain of industry, and all the rest is conditioned first upon work that finds its expression in the family, that supports the family. So teach the boy that he is to be expected to be able to earn his own livelihood; that it is a shame and scandal for him not to be self-dependent, not to be able to hold his own in the rough work of actual life. Teach the girl that so far from its being her duty to try to avoid all labor, all effort, that it should be a matter of pride to her to be as good a housewife as her mother was before her."

MR. DUKE'S TESTIMONY

Head of Alleged Tobacco Trust Tells of Secret Mergers.

New York, Feb. 27.—That the action of the American Tobacco company in secretly buying up certain rival companies and suppressing the fact of the purchases was against his better judgment, was testified to by Jas. B. Duke, president of the American Tobacco company, in the federal suit to dissolve the company. Mr. Duke further said that such action was taken by the company to please those who controlled the companies which were taken over. Mr. Duke's testimony was taken at his home, where he is confined by illness.

Much of Mr. Duke's evidence related to the history of the formation of the alleged tobacco trust. He declared that on no occasion did his company obtain control of or buy into a rival company to force that company out of business, but that such purchases were made only for investment. The Union Tobacco company was bought, Mr. Duke said, because the American Tobacco company believed that by the purchase it would secure strong financial associations and thereby enable the parent company to take in the United States Tobacco company.

Questioned in relation to the prices of tobacco leaf, Mr. Duke said that it was the desire of the American Tobacco company to have a stable and uniform price for the commodity, and that while the company hoped that the price would be maintained at a reasonable figure, it did not seriously object to any price so long as its competitors paid the same price.

Warrant for Roy's Arrest.

Portsmouth, N. H., Feb. 27.—A warrant for the arrest of Paul E. Roy, on the charge that he murdered his brother-in-law, George A. Carkins, at Newington, on Jan. 2, was sworn out last night by Sheriff M. M. Collis of Rockingham county. Although Roy is in France and is said to be a citizen of that country, the authorities have determined to get him here for trial if possible. Roy's wife, an actress, recently revealed that the death of Carkins, which had been officially declared to be a suicide, was due to a shot from a pistol in Roy's hands.

THE HERCULES BEETLE.

This South American Giant Is the Biggest Bug in the World.

To the Hercules beetle, a giant among insects, which is found in certain portions of Central and South America as well as in the island of Dominica, one of the British West Indies, belongs the distinction of being the biggest bug in the world. In appearance this creature is anything but prepossessing and looks as if it belonged with pink snakes, purple spiders and other creatures of the imagination.

It is a common trait of tourists and travelers to make little of anything seen in foreign lands, especially in the little West Indian islands, and to declare that similar things of vastly greater size or better quality occur in "God's country." When they run across the Hercules beetle, however, they are obliged to acknowledge themselves beaten.

Although so formidable in appearance, this insect is perfectly harmless. It lives in the heavy forests and feeds on the sweetish sap or gum of native trees. The larva, or grub, is about four inches long and as thick as a man's thumb and looks like a huge white maggot. It is considered a delicacy by the native negroes and caribs, who roast it in hot ashes and say that it tastes like roasted nuts.

Clumsy in appearance, the Hercules beetle possesses great powers of flight, and in the outlying villages it is not uncommon for one of these huge creatures to enter the native houses, being attracted thereto by the lights. The inevitable result is a prompt extinguishing of the candle by the wind created by the beetle's buzzing wings, accompanied by screams from the inmates of the house, who imagine a jumble, or evil spirit, has invaded their dwelling.

A popular belief among the natives is that the Hercules beetle saws off limbs of trees by grasping them between the two hornlike appendages and flying round and round. This is a manifest impossibility, as the insect has but little power in the horns, and, moreover, the upper one is lined with a soft, velvety hair, which would be rubbed off at once by any friction.

TABLECLOTHS.

The "Doubblers" and the "Bubbles" of Olden Times.

In the twelfth century the tablecloths were very large and were always laid on the table double. For a long time they were called "doubblers" for that reason. The cloth was first placed so as to touch the floor on the side of the table at which the guests sat. Then all the cloth that remained was folded so that it just covered the table.

Charles V. had sixty-seven tablecloths which were from fifteen to twenty yards long and two yards wide. He had one cloth which was thirty-two yards long, and that had the arms of France embroidered on it in silk. All of these were fringed.

In the sixteenth century "doubblers," or double cloths, were replaced by two tablecloths, one of which was small and was laid just as we lay ours to day.

The other, which was put on over it, was large and of beautifully figured linen. It was skillfully folded in such a way that, as a book of that time says, "it resembled a winding river, gently ruffled by a little breeze, for among very many little folds were here and there great bubbles."

It must have required much art and care to make dishes, plates, saltcellars, sauce dishes and glasses stand steadily in the midst of this undulating sea and among those "bubbles" and puffy folds.

However, the fashion had only a short existence, as is apt to be the case with impractical fashions, and toward the latter part of the century a single cloth, laid flat and touching the floor on all sides of the table, came into general use.

Not the Same Bill.

After much persuasion Sir John Astley allowed himself to be put forward some years ago as a Conservative candidate for parliament from Lincolnshire. He confessed he knew little about politics, but entered into the campaign as rare sport. One day he addressed a meeting of electors at a village in the isle of Axholme, and when he had finished somebody challenged his hearers to fire questions at him. Presently there came the query, "What do you think of Sir Wilfrid Lawson's liquor bill?" For a moment Sir John was nonplused, but only for a moment. Pulling himself together, he replied, "I cannot answer for Sir Wilfrid Lawson's liquor bill, but I do know that last year my own was a deuced sight too big!"

The Holly.

The holly in Germany is called Christdorn, or Christ's thorn, the legend being that it was of this plant that the crown of thorns was made. In France the honor is assigned to the hawthorn, which is there called the noble thorn. In Spain the legend assigns the honor to the bramble. An old Scotch legend makes the crown to consist of thistle blades, while in the folklore of England the climbing rose is said to have been the plant selected by the persecutors.

Big Explosion in Steel Works.

Johnstown, Pa., Feb. 27.—With a concussion that shook houses and business buildings within a radius of several blocks, broke windows and inflicted other damage to the property, an explosion in the iron converter building of the Cambria Steel company seriously injured four men and practically wrecked the large building.

A SPEEDY HEARING

Terrorists Who Were Taken In Russian Drag Net Placed on Trial Today.

PUNISHABLE WITH DEATH

This Is the Penalty Attaching Under Martial Law to Attempts on Lives of Officials.

Military Court Is Holding Its Hearing Behind Closed Doors In Grim Fortress.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 27.—Ten of the terrorists who participated in the unsuccessful attempt made in this city last week to kill Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholasievitch and M. Chetchevlovitch, the minister of justice, were placed on trial today before a military court in the fortress of SS. Peter and Paul.

The hearing is being held behind closed doors. An attempt upon the life of a government official, under the rules of minor martial law, is punishable with death. Among the accused is an Italian journalist named Calvine, who has represented at St. Petersburg La Vita of Rome and Il Tempo of Milan. The eleventh man arrested, as a direct participant in the attempted outrage, will not be placed on trial, the police saying that the charges against him are not sufficient. It is thought that this eleventh man may be one of the police agents through whom the plot was revealed. The other terrorists who were gathered in Feb. 20, who were not caught in the act, as well as those arrested since the frustration of the plot, will be held for hearing.

From documents seized by the police the conclusion has been reached that one of the centers of the manufacture of bombs was located in the Baltic provinces. The authorities have sent a detachment of police agents to this place to make further arrests. In order to cope more adequately with the Russian revolutionists who make their headquarters in Finland, the minister of the interior has drafted and sent to Helsinki a project for the reorganization of the Finnish police.

The Odeous Hartje Case.

Pittsburg, Feb. 27.—Slow progress is being made in the taking of evidence for the prosecution in the trial of Augustus Hartje, the millionaire paper manufacturer, John L. Welshons, his friend, and Clifford Hoce, a negro coachman, on charges of conspiracy and subornation of perjury, growing out of Hartje's suit for divorce.

AFTER THE "DOCS"

State Board Investigating Matter of Illegal Licenses.

Indianapolis, Feb. 27.—That the state board of medical registration and examination will continue unrelentingly in its campaign against the fraudulent practice of medicine until the license of every physician of questionable reputation has been revoked unless the physician shall change his ways quickly and in a radical way, was in substance the statement made by W. A. Spurgeon of Muncie, member of the board. Dr. Spurgeon said that all members of the board have been active in their efforts to prevent the fraudulent practice of medicine and the fraudulent issuance of licenses. As a result several cases are now before the board.

The Sprague's Great Tow.

New Albany, Ind., Feb. 27.—The Sprague, the largest towboat on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, which had been engaged for several days in re-assembling its tow at the foot of the falls opposite this city, has left for a record-breaking trip to New Orleans. The tow consisted of seventy-five boats and barges, containing 2,625,000 bushels or 210,000,000 pounds. This amounts to 105,000 tons and would fill 3,500 freight cars, making over 200 trains of seventeen cars each, or one solid train nearly thirty miles' long.

Worry Led to Suicide.

Portland, Ind., Feb. 27.—Martin Coulson, fifty-five years old, a farmer, near Walnut Corner, Green township, committed suicide by cutting his throat from ear to ear with a corn cutter. The act was witnessed by Coulson's young son, but the lad was unable to prevent it. It is thought that worry over his inability to get a farm on which to live prompted the act. He was obliged to surrender the farm on which he was living by the first of March.

National Park Movement.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 27.—The delegates to the annual meeting of the Indiana Society of Sons of the American Revolution decided to ask the legislature and congress to buy the site of old Fort Harrison and convert it into a national park because of its association with two presidents of the United States, William Henry Harrison and Zachary Taylor, both of whom served as commandant of the fort.

THE TARIFF DEFENDED

Mr. Dalzell Tells the House What Protection Has Accomplished.

Washington, Feb. 27.—The climax of general debate on the army appropriation bill in the house of representatives came when Mr. Dalzell of Pennsylvania, recognized as one of the foremost protectionists of the country, delivered an exhaustive speech in defense of the Republican party and its policies, in which he upheld the principle of the protective tariff system, and said that under it the United States had become the greatest of manufacturing nations. He did not believe there was any necessity for tariff revision, but thought it was well to recognize the claims of those who think there should be some alterations. Whatever that revision, provided the Republicans were successful at the next election, he assured his hearers it would be in accordance with the Republican theory of protection to American industries and the wages of the workmen of this country.

The Republican tariff system was attacked by Mr. Houston (Tenn.), to which he charged the trusts owed their being, and he urged its revision. Other addresses were made by Mr. Sherwood (Ohio) in support of his bill to pension soldiers of the civil war one dollar a day, and by Mr. Boutelle (Ill.), who referred to the fact that the gold in the United States for the first time had reached one thousand million dollars. The army appropriation bill was read for amendment.

There were two speeches in criticism of the Aldrich currency bill in the senate. Senator Culberson criticized the measure and spoke in favor of amendments he deemed necessary to make it of service. Senator Nelson also denounced the measure as of no importance in its present form.

The currency bill was on motion of Mr. Aldrich made the unfinished business of the senate. The bill to codify and revise the criminal laws of the United States was passed. Before its adoption the amendment offered by Senator Culberson penalizing the improper giving out of information by government officials affecting the market value of products of the soil except upon proper authority was incorporated in the measure.

Threatened Revolt in India.

Boston, Feb. 27.—The officers of the German steamship Neuenfels, which has arrived here from India and Ceylon, report that the natives are openly defying the British. They have boycotted British goods and have refused to handle cargoes shipped by British merchants. In the interior they are on the verge of revolt, and in many places they are arming and preparing to combat British rule. Agitators are inciting the natives to acts of violence. They believe the Japanese will aid them if they engage in war with England.

The Defense Rests.

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 27.—The defense in the conspiracy suit against Contractor Sanderson, ex-Auditor General Snyder, ex-State Treasurer Mathews, and ex-Superintendent of Public Grounds and Buildings Shumaker, on trial in the Dauphin county court, rested, and today the commonwealth began calling witnesses in rebuttal.

Dog's Loss Is Boy's Gain.

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 27.—A large bone from the arm of Verne Wolfe, fourteen years old, of Oaktown, was removed by Dr. W. H. Gilbert, and the bone from the leg of a large St. Bernard dog was substituted. The operation promises to be successful. The boy has been a sufferer from rheumatism.

Tug Overtook Steamer.

New Orleans, Feb. 27.—At the mouth of the Mississippi river, a 100-mile chase was ended by a deputy United States marshal on a tug overtaking the British steamer Inchkeith and serving libel papers on her captain. The Inchkeith will lie at the mouth of the river until the libel is settled.

Accidentally Killed Mother.

Thebes, Ill., Feb. 27.—Mrs. M. A. Chester was accidentally killed by her son, Charles Lambert, sixteen years old, in a vain attempt to prevent an unknown man from entering the house. The stranger fled. The coroner's jury exonerated the son and search is being made for the assailant.

RECIPE FOR OLD AGE

Physician's Health Rules For Living Over a Century.

TOOK CARE OF HIS STOMACH

In This, the Late Dr. W. M. Starr of Washington Declared, Lay Secret of Longevity Which All Might Attain. Never Went into Water Above His Head.

Dr. William M. Starr, oldest citizen of the District of Columbia, who recently died at Washington from cystitis, lived to be 101 years old and told how he did it.

Dr. Starr had a varied career. He was born on what was afterward the battlefield of Bull Run, in Virginia. He traveled extensively in the west, where he built and sold log cabins. Then he became a miner in California in 1849, a planter in Louisiana, a soldier in the Confederate army and ended his days as a medical botanist in Washington.

Dr. Starr never had the services of a physician until his last illness, when he was attended by Dr. J. H. Waring of Washington.

"Longevity is assured every one if he will treat his stomach decently," said Dr. Starr in explaining his long life. "That is the treatment I have accorded mine since I was fourteen years old. Here are a few of my simple rules, to which I attribute the years that have passed over my head without leaving the marks I see upon many younger men around me:

"I never ate as much as I could eat in my entire life.

"I never drank intoxicants of any kind.

"I have never used tobacco in any form.

"I have never taken more than half a glass of ice water at once.

"I never drank ice water after meals, thus paralyzing the digestive organs.

"I have never gone in water above my head. A man's head has no more business under the water than a fish has out of it.

"I only learned what foods were injurious and those which assisted nature in its work. I always avoided the former.

"I have never remained in a draft when overheated.

"I eat only two meals a day—at 8 a. m. and 4 p. m."

A short time before his death Dr. Starr said:

"For more than thirty years I have followed a regular programme. I retire early, rise a little before 8 and eat a light breakfast. For the morning meal I generally order two scrambled eggs, bread and butter, mashed potatoes and stale bread and milk. The menu for the afternoon meal, taken at 4 o'clock, is practically the same, with the addition of lean meats, tomatoes, prunes or apple sauce. I eat but two meals a day. I drink no water with my food. Under no circumstances would I take a glass of ice water. Ice water poured into the stomach at meal-time simply stops digestion until the water becomes the temperature of the blood.

"A large part of the human family dig their own graves with their teeth. They eat what they should not, they eat when they should not, and they eat more than they should and then expect some doctor with poisonous medicines to keep them in health. Everything you eat, drink or chew is either a benefit or an injury to you. Remember that. What not to eat is just as important as what to eat.

"Investigation has taught me that if you would live long you must put on the blacklist all pies and pastry, oatmeal, fat meats of every kind, coffee, warm bread and in some respects milk. Too much milk is not good for any one."

RUSHVILLE, INDIANA, FEBRUARY 27, 1908

The Republican joint senatorial convention to nominate a joint senator for the counties of Rush, Hancock and Fayette, will be held at Shelbyville on April 9th, in connection with the congressional convention.

It is to be hoped that the new Employers Liability bill now before congress may escape the fate of the former bill which was wrecked on the shoals of unconstitutionality. Every care seems to have been exerted to make the bill safe, and as the large labor organizations as well as the President favor it, it will probably pass. If it secures its end it will certainly be a boon to the classes it was designed to benefit.

Whatever differences of opinion there may be over the question of revising the tariff, the feeling is well nigh unanimous that the tariff on wood pulp and printing paper is a tax on knowledge, and that is one of the most harmful and obnoxious of all taxes. Every reasonable person recognizes that the newspaper, and especially the country press which reaches almost every family in a community, is an educator which silently, potentially and cheaply diffuses knowledge, disseminates news, promotes intelligence and broadens the mental view. Therefore, no obstacles, whether in the form of tariffs, trust combinations or unreasonable postal regulations, should interfere with its uplifting ministry.

A great many of the older people look back with pleasure to the time of the old-fashioned spelling bee. It is therefore interesting to know that a Massachusetts man encouraged the continuance of the old-fashioned spelling bee, by providing that the income from $500 be used annually for prizes to those who win in those matches. The contest is to be under the control of the board of education; it is to take place in a public hall; admission free, and to be conducted in the old way of choosing sides. The prizes are to be $10, $6 and $4.

The little legacy will be productive of a great deal of good and it will keep up much healthy and sensible fun. When a person is spelled down in one of these bees, he has to laugh over the discomfiture as if it was a streak of luck. It isn't; and down in the crevices of his heart he doesn't like it as much as he seems to; but it is a lesson that teaches one to bear his bad fate triumphantly.

On the whole, that legator has rendered his community a pretty good service; almost as great as lies within the compass of a $500 legacy. And think of the prizes—how much there may be in them for many visitors.

INDIANA POLITICS

BY ROBERT G. TUCKER

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 27.—Governor Hanly, who is known as a foe of liquor, will lend his strength to the anti-saloon movement in the East, and within the next few weeks will make a number of speeches in Eastern states in the interest of local option. Dispatches from Philadelphia announcing this plan had it that the governor would visit Washington county, Pennsylvania, soon, in the interest of the fight against liquor. The local optionists there are to conduct a speaking campaign under the direction of the Anti-Saloon League. "I will deliver four or five addresses in Pennsylvania during the latter part of March and the early part of April," said the governor. "I am going there at the request of S. E. Nicholson, superintendent of the Pennsylvania Anti-Saloon League. Mr. Nicholson was formerly a resident of this state, and is a very good friend of mine." Governor Hanly will leave Saturday evening for Trenton, N. J., where on Monday evening he will address a mass meeting in the interest of local option.

Defeated in a fierce contest for a majority of the delegates to the Fifth district Republican convention at Brazil, Otis Gully of Danville showed his gameness by placing his rival, Howard Maxwell of Rockville in nomination for congress. James M. Bishop of Mooresville, the third candidate, ended the race by seconding Gully's motion that Maxwell's nomination be made unanimous. A spectacular convention was expected, but Maxwell's forces brought about a landslide in his favor by electing nearly every delegate in Vigo and Clay counties. The convention became a harmony meeting that brought joy to the hearts of Republican leaders, who were afraid that the grueling fight for delegates would cause a breach in the party's ranks. On Gully's motion the rules were suspended and the secretary cast the entire vote of the convention for Maxwell. The latter is one of the leading attorneys of western Indiana and is regarded as a strong candidate.

The supreme court in a case appealed from Muncie by Nick Donovan, who was convicted on a charge of illegal sale of liquor, rendered a decision holding the validity of the "blind tiger" law enacted by the last legislature. There was no decision, however, on the question raised by the liquor dealers that the "search and seizure" clause of the law is invalid, as that question was not raised by the appeal. The law, as it stands, permits an officer to invade any place on a warrant being regularly issued, and to seize and destroy all liquor found where there is no license for the sale of it. The liquor dealers are asserting that the "blind tiger" law was superseded by the "druggists act" passed after it became effective, giving druggists authority to sell liquor for medicinal purposes.

Friends of Harvey D. Vories are urging him to seek the Democratic nomination for state superintendent of public instruction. Mr. Vories is considering the proposition. He served as state superintendent from 1891 to 1895. The only other Democrat mentioned for the nomination is Prof. Robert J. Aley, head of the mathematical department of Indiana university, who made the race two years ago. He has not announced himself as a candidate for renomination, but friends say that he will ask the convention for additional honors.

It is understood that Chairman Ruckelshaus of the Marion county Republican committee will issue a call for election of delegates to the state convention the latter part of next week.

Knox, the "Trust Buster"

Personal Side of Pennsylvania's Junior Senator, a Distinguished Candidate For the Presidency—Clean Thinker, With Much Intellectual Force and a Good Story Teller.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

WHY not hold a convention of presidential candidates? There are enough of them, and they are more interested than anybody else. Let them get together and fight it out. The first number on the programme would be a speechmaking contest to show which candidate has the most real oratory and which the most flapdoodle. The second test would be to determine who could talk the longest on the tariff without committing himself. A third exercise might be to discover which aspirant could make the most imposing speech on money and never get below the surface of the question. Other tests might well be to show which candidate could be the most undeviating friend of labor without losing the support of capital, which could do the most things to the railroads without the railroads knowing anything about it, which could hammer the trusts most fiercely without the trusts resenting it and withdrawing their support, which could most effectively oppose corporation contributions to the campaign fund in future campaigns and who could best impersonate the one and only simon pure Roosevelt legatee without offending Roosevelt's enemies.

This sort of forensic foot race would not only help the public in sizing up the entries, but would be most valuable training for the candidates themselves. It would give them a chance to get acquainted with each other, which he is a better Roosevelt man than Roosevelt himself, several other candidates could be wildly wigwagging with imitation lightning rods, and last, but not least, the Hon. Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania could gallop madly on the stage drifting a spanking team of thoroughbreds named Corporation Attorney and Trust Buster, for it is a fact not denied of any that Senator Knox has at times driven behind each of these horses. He was once a corporation attorney, and a good one, and he was afterward the first of the trust busting attorney generals, and he was good at that also. It is true he never put any of the big criminals in jail, but neither have his successors. After awhile the American people and their representatives at Washington will get through the talk stage of doing things and get into the deed stage. When that time comes, some of the large thieves may go to jail, but not before.

If a convention of presidential candidates were held, it is probable that Knox would be the shortest man there, although La Follette of Wisconsin would run him a close race. These two are the big little men of the senate. Knox is so abbreviated that Roosevelt called him "the sawed off cherub."

One morning Vice President Fairbanks saw Knox with an expectant look on his face and a bundle of papers in his hand, but could not determine whether the little man was sit would be as pleasant as the enforced association of a bunch of suitors to the hand of the same girl. They could also give each other points in the high art of side stepping and in the higher end of saying nothing in an earnest and dignified manner. By all means let us have a convention of presidential possibilities. Of course most of them would be presidential impossibilities, but they would not know this until fate had tipped over one or two houses on them.

It would be a great spectacle for the plain people. Imagine the Hon. Charles Warren Fairbanks of Indiana proving by a long and eloquent argument that things equal to the same thing are equal to each other, provided it is not otherwise arranged in the tariff schedules. Fancy the Hon. William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska declaring with impassioned fervor for the government ownership of railroads—after 1950. Picture the manly and monumental form of the Hon. William Howard Taft of Ohio arising in its place and from it a small and piping voice issuing to this effect:

You'd scarce expect one of my age To speak in public on the stage, But you just ought to hear my pa.

Then the Hon. Leslie Mortimer Shaw of New York and Denison, Ia., would come forward to tell a little anecdote, after which the appreciative chorus of other candidates would sing:

In the days of old Rameses—
Are you on?
In the days of old Rameses—
Are you on?
In the days of old Rameses—
That story had perished—
Are you on? Are you on? Are you on?

Trust Busting Attorney General.

The Hon. George Bruce Cortelyou could finance the affair, the Hon. William L. Douglas of Massachusetts could furnish racing shoes for the grand presidential sprint, the Hon. Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois could execute a buck and wing dance, showing just how young a man of seventy-two feels; George Gray and Judson Harmon could sing a duet entitled "Safe and Sane," Governor Charles E. Hughes of New York could show that ting down or standing up. He asked one of the clerks, who after a close scrutiny announced that he was standing. "The senator from Pennsylvania," said the chair in his most solemn and parliamentary tone.

Good Story Teller.

Senator Knox tells many good stories, and the beauty of them is that they still have the dew of youth upon their brow. This may be due to a sense of discrimination in Knox or it may be owing to the fact that Chauncey M. Depew and Leslie M. Shaw have used up all the old stories.

The following is Knox's Philadelphia turtle tale:

A man stood before a restaurant where three large turtles were displayed. One hand was in his mouth, but with the other he was poking at the turtles.

"Here," said the proprietor, "keep away from there or you will get hurt." "Hurt!" said the man, taking his finger from his mouth and eyeing it ruefully. "I have been hurt already, but I am now trying to find out which is the head and which is the tail of this animal, so that I can tell whether I have been bitten or stung."

Senator Knox's physician advised him to quit using tobacco. A few days later he happened in unexpectedly and found the senator contentedly puffing at a large black cigar.

"Here, senator," he said, "I thought I told you to quit that."

"Quit what?" asked Knox innocently. "Why, quit using tobacco."

"Tobacco! Why, my dear doctor, I am not using tobacco. I am smoking a cigar Senator Dolliver gave me."

When hurriedly leaving the president one day, Knox was eagerly accosted by a bunch of reporters.

"What was your conference about?" they asked in chorus.

"An appointment," said Knox, breaking through the cordon.

"A Pennsylvania appointment?"

"Oh, yes, certainly—a Philadelphia one. Can't stop now, but there may be a statement from the White House this afternoon."

Th-reupon all the Pennsylvania correspondents got busy. If Senator Knox took such an interest in the case, the appointment must be for one of the biggest offices in the president's gift.

Late in the afternoon they got an audience with Private Secretary Loeb. "Appointment?" he said, with a puzzled air. "Oh, yes, I remember. It was an appointment for the president to speak in Philadelphia. Why, what's the matter?"

And to this day those reporters wonder if it was a practical joke on the part of Knox.

Spoiled a Surprise.

While Senator Knox is the soul of discretion in his business and public life, Mrs. Knox asserts that he cannot keep a secret in his own family. It was planned to surprise Philander junior with a planola on Christmas. The elder Philander, however, met the boy and in searching about for news that would please his little chum fell on the planola. So when Mrs. Knox was ready to spring the surprise Philander junior remarked gleefully:

"Oh, yes, I know—the planola."

Mrs. Knox looked at her husband, but he was extremely busy with the morning paper.

Senator Knox has a fad of buying rare editions and old prints. Mrs. Knox, hearing of an auction where some books she knew he would want were on sale, decided to surprise him, as the senator had to leave the city the day before the auction came off. When she began bidding on her choice editions, she found one persistent bidder in the field. After running the prices up to four or five times what they should be she was reluctantly forced to quit the field.

"Who got those editions on which I was bidding?" she asked the auctioneer after the sale.

"Senator Knox," was the reply, and he was surprised to see the lady almost faint.

It was true. Knox had his representative at the sale, and Mrs. Knox in bidding up prices had put him out of pocket several hundred dollars.

"I never did like surprises," remarked the senator when he heard of it.

Recipient of Big Fees.

Before becoming attorney general Mr. Knox was counsel for the Carnegie company at Pittsburgh. He scarcely ever appeared in court, but earned enormous fees as a consulting attorney. He was retained once in an Indianapolis street car case and as he did not wish to appear put his fee at what he thought would be a prohibitive figure. It was paid without a word, however. The associate counsel in the case was ex-President Benjamin Harrison. Out of a sense of courtesy Knox offered to divide the fee, but Harrison refused. After winning the case Knox asked the former president what he got. "Twenty-five thousand dollars," said Harrison, with some pride. "What did they give you?" "One hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars," answered Knox.

At another time Mr. Knox wished to make a trip to Egypt, but was asked to take a certain case that would make the trip impossible. Again he placed the fee at what he thought was a prohibitive figure, but again his terms were accepted. A friend who heard Knox's outburst when he found that his outing to Egypt must be abandoned said that it was the first time he had ever heard a lawyer swear over receiving a big fee.

Philander Chase Knox was born at Brownsville, Pa., in 1853. His father was a warm personal friend of James G. Blaine, who was also born in Brownsville. Young Knox received a college education, studied law and was admitted to the bar at the age of twenty-two. A year later he was made assistant district attorney of western Pennsylvania. He next formed the well known firm of Knox & Reed, which probably had the largest corporation practice in Pittsburgh.

One of Knox's school friends was William McKinley, and this fact doubtless had much to do with making the Pennsylvanian attorney general in the summer of 1901. Knox's three great achievements in that office were the dissolution of the Northern Securities merger, the enjoining of the beef trust and the clearing up of the legal title and purchase of the Panama canal. In 1904 he was appointed United States senator to succeed the late Matthew S. Quay and was afterward elected both to the short and long terms.

Fond of Golf and Driving.

Natty in dress and short in stature, Senator Knox has a boyish appearance, which is forgotten on closer acquaintance. The impression he makes in conversation is that of a clean thinker and a man of intellectual force. His eyes are blue and almost cold. Knox's neighbors at Valley Forge, the historic spot at which he has a beautiful country home, accuse him of being an aristocrat. He certainly is not effusive, but is quietly affable with those whom he knows. His chief recreations are golf and driving.

Mrs. Knox says she exists at Washington and lives at Valley Forge. She was a Miss Smith of Pittsburgh and is of quiet and refined tastes. She is about the same height as her husband and has the same youthful appearance. The Knoxes have the best private library in Washington.

Friends of Senator Knox insist that he is neither a radical nor a reactionary. With some of the president's policies he is in full accord, having practically drafted the rate bill and other administration measures. With others of Mr. Roosevelt's ideas he is in frank and open disagreement.

One famous expression of Attorney General Knox is typical of the man. It was after the winning of the Northern Securities case, and to reassure the frightened financiers Knox crisply exclaimed:

"The government does not propose to run amuck."

INDIANA HUNTSMEN LOSE IN SEA FIRE

Boat With Consignment of 1800 Birds for Indiana was Destroyed at Sea

Columbus, Ind., Feb. 27.—State Fish and Game Commissioner Z. T. Sweeney has just learned that 1,800 Hungarian partridges and Mongolian pheasants, which were consigned to him to be distributed throughout the state, had been destroyed when the steamer St. Cuthbert was burned off Halifax a few days ago. These birds, which were young ones, had been captured in Austro-Hungary, and were consigned directly to a firm in Yordley, Pa., who were to distribute them subject to Mr. Sweeney's orders. An effort will be made to duplicate the order. In case that can be done, 1,800 birds will be turned loose in Indiana to take the place of the quails that have furnished sport for the huntsmen. If the order cannot be duplicated many hunters will be disappointed, as Sweeney had promised to get the birds in time for the next open season. Mr. Sweeney stated that if the birds are secured he will place a limit on the number of birds to be shot each day, making it not more than four or five. The birds weigh about two pounds each.

Laurel is contemplating a new addition. It has occasioned much talk of late. In the Laurel Review this week, a native philosopher of the Abe Martin type, throws out a line of stuff that means something, but what it is we—well, here it is:

"While settin in front of Ben Jings' fireplace tother night and listinin to him juggle figgers at tryin to come at how many lots his 17 acres will make, and how many thousand dollars they was going to bring him, he suddenly broke away from the subject to tell me how he's goin to raise the revenoo to run greater Laurel, when we get her bilt. Tax mad dogs, sez he. I traded one of the lots for a mule already and the mule was a good 'un, if he did have a wooden limb. He had kicked out the side of his log stable the first night he was in it, and done it with the wooden leg at that. When I pintoed out to Ben that the mule limped a little, he sed 'twas caused by the limb bein made from green timber—was a most too heavy—but when it got seasoned, he wouldn't limb a bit. I didn't say nothin, but kept a mighty thinkin. He's gone to Rushville today with that mule—took a load of sassafras—and if the mule happens to break that wooden leg on the ice, Ben will have to make him a new one before he can git home."

By HELEN R. MARTIN,
Author of "Tillie: A Mennonite Maid."

Copyright, 1907, By McClure, Phillips & Company.

Georgiana appeared disconcerted, but she made another brave effort to turn the tide of the talk into a higher channel.

"I was led to come to you because I am unfortunately rather run down from the last crowded months of the college year, and I felt that really to regain my poise I must get near to nature and that the best way to do that would be actually to go and live with the people of the soil and really become one of them."

"And live the simple life," put in Daisy. "I think one could do it here, Georgiana, without the strain that it is in town. Out here," she added hopefully, "it won't require my co-operation. I'll have to live it."

"Not if there is inward rebellion," instructed Georgiana gently. "Remember, dear, the simple life is subjective as well as objective."

Daisy accepted it with a sigh. "I'll make a note of that," she said, gathering up the blank book and pencil she wore suspended from her belt. She met the wondering looks of the Morningstars as she leafed her notebook. "Yes," she nodded, volunteering an explanation, "I write down things which impress me. My uncle thinks keeping a notebook may give me mental pause."

"Poise," corrected Georgiana, blushing for her cousin.

"Poise," nodded Daisy; she always accepted Georgiana's corrections without question. "To collect facts—facts with no deviation from accuracy."

"It will be excellent mental discipline for you, Daisy," said Georgiana kindly.

"My only doubt is," said Daisy anxiously, "that it isn't consistent with the simple life—keeping a notebook to improve your mind. Because you know it certainly isn't 'reposeful'—keeping a notebook. Now, on the bare face of it, without any philosophy, my motto for a simple life would be, 'Let things slide.' I could live up to that," she said with conviction.

Mrs. Morningstar laughed. "You fetch out such big words still! I like Doc—Pete, I mean," she quickly corrected herself. "Pete, he's always spittin' them big words out too. A body'd think it would go to your brains; ain't it?"

Georgiana picked up hope—her intuition as to Pete was perhaps after all not a mistake.

"Pete has had some schooling?" she inquired.

At this question Georgiana was puzzled to observe that Eunice, who sat on the opposite side of the table from Pete, gave a slight start, raised her constantly downcast eyes and looked at the farmhand with a faint smile. Though his own gaze had been resting persistently, almost embarrassingly, with a bucolic, stupid stare upon herself, Georgiana saw that he met Eunice's glance with a sudden look of interest which seemed to change his whole countenance.

But Mrs. Morningstar's reply to her question diverted her attention and arrested her sense of astonishment at this puzzling transformation.

"If he had schoolin'? Well, I don't know if he was to college like you. But this I kin say—he kin read wonderful good off the noospaper. Why, you wouldn't know it was readin'—you'd think he was just talkin'."

"Now I'd put it the other way round," said Mr. Morningstar critically. "I'd say his talkin' sounds as if he was readin'. Pete," he asked, "was you to such a college ever?"

"Well," said Pete tentatively, "I seen a college onct when I was in town."

Daisy gave forth a little squeal of amusement, but instantly pulled her countenance straight again, with an apprehensive glance toward Georgiana.

"Most young men," remarked Georgiana, glancing from Pete to Abe, "are discontented in the country these days and are ambitious to get to town. I think it a pity often. Country life is so much more healthful—spiritually, I mean."

Abe did not even look up, but Pete, his mouth full of potato, replied, "My job out here suits me all right."

Discontented? questioned Mr. Morningstar. "We've got enough to eat and a little over. What more can a person want?"

But the usually tongue-tied daughter Ollie here spoke up. "I guess a body wants a little pleasure, too, still," she said sulkily, scowling at her father; then suddenly, overwhelmed with shyness at the sound of her own voice, she colored violently and bent her eyes to her plate.

Mr. Morningstar's small eyes and mouth seemed to contract as he looked at her. "I ain't leavin' you run," he obstinately affirmed. "Eunice she never asts me has she the dare to go any."

"Yes, well, but"—Mrs. Morningstar came to the defense of her own in loud tones—"it's some different, too, with your own flesh and blood and a 'dopted child. It wouldn't become Eunice to be astin' to go. She's to work and pay fur bein' kep' ever since she was too little to work yet. Your own child, that's different again. You might leave Ollie go onct, pop, to this here ice cream festible in town. She's wonderful set on it. And you don't never leave her travel in society."

"I ain't leavin' her," he replied, with quiet stubbornness. "She'd want to spend some at the festible, and she'd stay late, and then when she'd have to git up early tomorrow she'd git sick fur me, and I'd have to have a doctor fur her."

"Well, leave her oversleep her breakfast onct. Eunice she kin do some of Ollie's work tomorrow mornin' till Ollie feels fur gittin' up."

Eunice did not again raise her eyes or manifest any sign of her feelings in hearing herself thus disposed of.

"I said Ollie wasn't to go now," Mr. Morningstar returned sharply. But Ollie scowled during all the rest of the meal.

"Well," Mr. Morningstar presently said, rising and pushing his chair away from him as he drew the back of his hand across his mouth, "I must go out back now and separate. Would you mebbe like to see me separate?" he inquired of the young ladies.

"Separate?" questioned Daisy, her head a bit on one side to catch a new fact on the wing, as it were.

"To see the milk and cream separated apart by our new milk separator where I bought off of such a agent from New York over," Mr. Morningstar explained.

"How perfectly dear!" cried Daisy, rising at once, her notebook ready in her hand. "Will you come, Georgiana?"

"You kin see what runs the machinery all," the farmer said as they followed him out of the kitchen.

"Isn't it perfectly dear and quaint, Georgiana?" exclaimed Daisy volubly as they went across the room to the door. "Everything is so rural!"

While Mrs. Morningstar and the two girls were clearing away the dinner the former pronounced it as her opinion that "that Doc" was "a black eyed sharper" who had committed some crime which made him afraid to be recognized by "towners."

CHAPTER V.

"SO that," mused Peter Kinross as, dressed in overalls and with his hair grotesquely plastered down with Abe Morningstar's pomatum, he strolled about at dusk that evening under the trees of the orchard, smoking his after supper cigar, "is the renowned Miss Georgiana Ellery, the beautiful, the accomplished! Sentimental," he pronounced, "from the crown of her head to the soles of her shoes! And intellectual! It would take a pretty brave man to go in for her! Well," he concluded, bending back his head and blowing out puffs of smoke, "she's a fair type of what the woman's college turns out nowadays. But, by Jupiter, a more stunningly beautiful girl I never saw!"

In spite, however, of this conclusion, he patted himself on the head for his cleverness in having devised so excellent a scheme for the preservation of his liberty. What a boredom it spared him!

There was one phase of his escapade which was not so pleasant to contemplate—the discovery of his deception when he should be obliged to meet these two young ladies in his true character upon his return to college in the fall.

His stroll had brought him to the fence which separated the orchard from the lane, and suddenly he stopped short and took his cigar from his mouth. There, a few feet away, leaning against the fence, stood Eunice. In the deepening twilight he had not seen her until nearly at her side.

Her relaxed attitude betrayed the weariness of her young body at the end of the day's toil, and the droop of her head against her hand suggested the pensiveness of her mind.

He felt glad that he had come upon her; he was so curious to know how his disguise affected her. She had actually been surprised into a faint smile of amusement at the dinner table. It had fairly startled him.

In the lane outside the fence four little boys were playing, children from neighboring farm laborers' cottages, and Eunice was watching them idly.

The dialogue of the little cubs was diverting, so he, too, rested against the fence and listened to them. He thought she must surely have heard his approach, but she did not stir.

"I used to be a townier—I lived at Lebanon," one boy was boasting. "Aw," scorned the other, "I lived furdern' that—I used to live out west yet!"

"Aw, why, you couldn't!" The first gave him the lie without ceremony. "The Indians would kill you if you lived out west!"

"I did too! Say, Reddy, didn't I used to live out west?"

"Yes, you did," Reddy championed him.

"But there's 550 Indians out west!" exclaimed the first boy statistically. "A body couldn't live out there!"

"Aw!" sneered Reddy. "Come off! You're thick! A body can't hardly learn you nothin'! The Indians ain't wild no more—they're tamed now!"

The dispute ended in a fist fight which led the combatants further down the road and out of earshot.

Kinross took his cigar from his mouth and spoke to Eunice across the space between them.

"Boys are queer animals, aren't they?"

She did not turn to look at him. For an instant she did not answer. Then, low and soft, her voice fell upon the still evening.

"Queer animals? But they are embryo men!"

His cigar almost fell from his hand. He stared at her averted profile in stupid astonishment.

"Are we a pair of cynics?" he at last found his voice to remark. But the words were not uttered before he realized that the space where she had stood was empty. She had turned and fled like a frightened bird. He stared after her retreating figure, his sense of the mystery which hung about her affecting him strangely.

"Was that the girl Eunice to whom I spoke and who answered me in such wise? 'They are embryo men!' Embryo. A girl who asks me who this Andrew Carnegie is anyway!"

He turned back to lean upon the fence again, put his cigar to his lips, and meditatively blew a long cloud of smoke into the air.

"By gosh!"

It expressed, as no other comment could have done, the state of his mind.

Kicked Off Train, Gets $4,750.

Indianapolis, Feb. 27.—In the suit of Charles R. Elrod against the L. E. & W. Railway company for $15,000 damages, a jury in the superior court granted the plaintiff $4,750.

Elrod claims that while stealing a ride on a freight train between Arcadia and Indianapolis, the conductor ordered him off a fast-moving train, and when he did not go, kicked him off, resulting in injuries.

Safe Blowing in Kentucky.

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 27.—Burglars entered the postoffice at Sturgis, Ky., blew open the safe and secured the money and stamps, aggregating $150. Tramps are under suspicion. Bloodhounds were sent for, but owing to the heavy rain they could do nothing.

Found for Defendant.

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 27.—Louis Schutz, the victim of the shotgun trap arranged to catch chicken thieves, failed to get damages in his suit against Ernest Gudman in the superior court, the jury finding for the defendant.

The Theft of Millions.

Moscow, Feb. 27.—Railway shares have taken a big drop in consequence of the sensational discovery of irregularities in the Moscow railways, including the theft of millions of dollars' worth of merchandise, extending over a long period, which was sold by the thieves at Berdichev and other towns.

Baldwin Gets Contract.

Washington, Feb. 27.—The signal office has awarded Captain Thomas S. Baldwin of New York city a contract for furnishing the army with a dirigible balloon. The airship must carry two men and fly not less than two hours. It is also required to attain a speed of twelve miles an hour.

Track Clearing Extraordinary.

NEW THEATER PLANS

Playhouse to Be Maintained For Advancement of Art.

LUXURIOUS IN ITS FITTINGS.

Splendid Structure to Be Erected in New York Will Seat 2,318—Fine Quarters For Star Performers—Immense Stage and Bar Open All Year Round.

Complete plans for the New theater, which is to be "maintained for the advancement of art and not for commercial gain," on the block in Central Park West, between Sixty-second and Sixty-third streets, New York, were recently given out by the architects of the remarkable structure. The excavating work has been done, and the foundations of the theater have been laid up to the level of the street. Work on the building will be pushed from now on, and it is expected that the New theater will be ready for the season of 1909.

Its founders hope that it will stand in the same relation to dramatic and musical art as do the principal theaters of Europe. It is planned not only to foster and stimulate art by the production of plays and light operas that are worth while, but also to maintain a school of musical and dramatic art.

The well to do men who stand behind the project have arranged that all profits above a very small interest on the money invested shall be devoted to the development of such a school, the accumulation of an endowment fund and other like purposes. Briefly, it is planned to make the New theater the nearest thing to a national theater that can be obtained in the United States.

The architects therefore have tried to plan a fitting home for the development of such an idea. The stage and auditorium will occupy but a moderate portion of its plan. Ample provision is made for a foyer, grand staircase, retiring and cloak rooms, smoking room, entrances, roof garden, buffet, quarters for confectioner and florist and similar accommodations.

The building will occupy a site fronting 200 feet on Central Park West. It will run back on Sixty-second street 225 feet and 200 feet on Sixty-third street. The exterior is to be of Indiana limestone. The architecture will follow the Italian renaissance. The main building will have a high base containing all the entrances and a two story colonnade. The foyer, extending through the height of two stories, will be accentuated by large arches extending the full height of the columns.

It may be noted in passing that the buffet will extend all along the front and that it will be open all the year round, as will the roof garden, restaurant and art instruction schools.

There will be twenty-two entrances, the biggest at the two corners, and the others will be strung along Sixty-second and Sixty-third streets. At the corners will be two monumental double staircases, one leading to the boxes, the other to the galleries.

The house will seat 2,318 people, 600 in the orchestra pit, 300 in the boxes and 1,418 in the two galleries. The boxes are arranged in two tiers of twenty-four each, most of which have been subscribed for. Nine stairways will lead from the boxes through the foyer. In the rear of the boxes will be a private hall, so that box occupants of one floor may visit other boxes on the same floor.

The auditorium will be elliptical in form, the long axis of the ellipse being parallel with the stage, so that the farthest box in the center of the house will be no farther from the stage than the last orchestra seat in the usual small theater.

No orchestra seat will be under a gallery. The architects have tried to make it possible for every person occupying a seat to hear and see everything. The acoustics will be as nearly perfect as possible.

The stage is to be 100 feet wide, 68 feet deep and 112 feet in the clear. The depth below the stage will be thirty-two feet. The proscenium arch is to be forty-five feet wide and forty feet high. Few theaters have a stage so large.

Accommodations for the stars will be luxurious. Rooms for twenty-three men and fifteen women have been provided for. All the dressing rooms face on the street. Four or five of the thirteen elevators will be used to take the chorus girls and supers to and from the stage.

The stage will be big enough for grand opera. The Metropolitan stage is no larger.

ONE NIGHT FRIDAY February 28

AMUSEMENTS

A Japanese vaudeville show is the subject of the first half of the moving picture film at the Vaude, and it certainly is worth the price of admission. The stunts are nothing short of miraculous, and besides the film being hand-colored, it presents a feast for the eye at the same time. "The Indian Love Story," which follows, is fine.

The Grand moving picture show is running a fine subject. A sculptor prepares himself a "Welsh Rabbit," and then lies down to sleep. It is in his dream that follows which gives the motive for the action of the piece. A fine marble statue of a woman turns to life, and he endeavors to make love to her, and this spoils all. Besides the automatic formation of three busts out of a lump of clay is interesting. The second subject is "A Comedy of Errors," a farce comedy which furnishes plenty of amusement.

Playgoers of all ages and people who have never before entered a theatre, will find in "Bud Hicks, the Yankee Doodle Boy" entertainment of a wholesome, mirthful and enjoyable type. No one can help but admire and love "Bud Hicks"—a manly little fellow, who has his own way to make in the world and is perfectly capable of making it. It is true he dresses fastidiously and uses slang, but underneath it all is an honest heart and a determination to succeed.

Incidentally he can jig, sing and dance to "beat the band," as can every other member of the excellent organization. —The melodious and catchy music, the side splitting comedy situations, the sweet pathos and unusual dramatic interest all enter into making "The Yankee Doodle Boy" an effective entertainment. The scenery is all special and the lighting effects novel. The big show will be here Friday at the Grand. Seats on sale at Hargrove & Mullins.

THE CRESCENT SYMBOL.

How It Came to Be Adopted by the Mohammedans.

The crescent symbol of the Mohammedans has nothing to do with their peculiar religious opinions and ceremonies. It was not originally a symbol of the followers of Mohammed at all, but was first used by the Byzantines. Thousands of coins have been found in all parts of Turkey which date back to the time when Constantinople was known as Byzantium, and on each of these the symbol of the crescent appears, proving conclusively that it was in use as an emblem among the people of that region long before Byzantium was overthrown and its name changed to Constantinople. The story of the origin of the crescent symbol is as follows: When Philip of Macedonia besieged Byzantium he had planned to storm the city on a certain cloudy night, but before his arrangements were completed the moon shone out and discovered his approach to the beleaguered citizens, who accordingly marched out and repulsed his forces, something which would have been impossible in the darkness. After that event all Byzantine coins bore the symbol of the crescent moon, which was always alluded to as the "savior of Byzantium."

After many years the hordes under Mohammed II. captured Constantinople. At that time the crescent was used everywhere and upon everything. Suspecting that there must be magical power in the emblem, the Mohammedans appropriated it and have since used it as their only symbolic decoration.

To Give Them All a Chance.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Just how far the senate committee on naval affairs will go into criticisms of battleship construction will be determined at an executive session today. It practically has been settled that all officers of the navy whose names have been connected with the recent criticisms of construction shall be called.

Five Bishops Complain.

ARMILDA WEBB

Armilda, daughter of Wier and Mary Webb, was born Aug. 4th, 1862, and departed this life at Fulton, Ky., Feb. 20, 1908, being in her 46th year.

In December, 1876, when only 14 years of age, she became a follower of her Master by being baptized in the icy waters of Little Blue river and remained faithful to his standard all the rest of her life. She later transferred her membership to the Christian church in this city, of which she was a member when she died.

On the 16th of October, 1881, she was united in the holy bonds of wedlock to Charles Seward. To this union were born eight children, three of whom were waiting for their mother in the other land; three boys and two girls are left to mourn with their father, besides her aged mother, four brothers, one sister and a host of other relatives and friends.

Mrs. Seward was a woman of lovely character, being of a kind, warm-hearted disposition, of a quiet nature; always cheerful, ever under adverse circumstances; a loving daughter and mother, and a true and faithful wife. Those who knew her best, loved her most.

To those who mourn, we can only say that God loves the full blown rose as well as the bud, and has taken her into the "Garden of Life" to be with those who have gone before. Be assured that He who watches over the sparrows will not forget the motherless children who are left, and turn to "Him, who doeth all things well," for surely this day, she walks with her Lord in Paradise.

MINT JULEP LAMENT.

Dixie's Sons in New York Bewail Dry Days Down Home.

Hoke Smith of Georgia was suggested as a candidate for the presidency on the Prohibition ticket the other night by Mirabeau L. Towns at the dinner of the Southern society in New York.

Over each table was a gayly colored lantern bearing the nickname of the state to which the guests seated there belonged. The Georgia contingent gathered under "Crackers," those from North Carolina had "Tar Heels" above them, while the Mississippi guests were designated as "Mossbacks."

Mr. Towns responded to the toast "Georgia." He was telling of the glories of the Empire State of the South, of her great resources, her splendid history, and when he spoke of her men as "brave, staid and sober" he was interrupted with the laughter of the diners.

"That's so," he said. "They are certainly sober down there now since they have prohibition. Why, Hoke Smith was elected governor of the state only on his promise that he would not take a drink within the borders of the state for two years. And these prohibitionists, who are becoming so plentiful in this country, are going to make him their leader. With Bryan and Roosevelt running out the trusts and Hoke Smith with the prohibitionists chasing alcohol away, there will be life in the old land yet."

All the speakers were poetical, but the effusion of Judge Charles F. Moore, who spoke for Virginia, took on the nature of a lament. It was original, was entitled "The South Is Going Dry" and was greatly applauded by the diners. It was as follows:

Lay the jest about the julep
In the camphor balls at last,
For the mint leaves have withered,
And the olden days are past.
That which made Milwaukee famous
Does not foam in Tennessee,
And the lid in Alabama
Is as tight locked as can be,
And the comic paper colonel
And his cronies will never sigh,
For the mint is waving gayly,
And the south is going dry.

By the stillside on the hillside
In Kentucky all is still,
And the only damp refreshment
Must be dipped up from the rill.
North Carolina's stately governor
Gives his soda glass a shoo,
And discusses local option
With the South Carolina gov.
It is useless at the fountain
To be winking of the eye,
For the cocktail glass is dusty,
And the south is going dry.

It is water, water everywhere,
And not a drop to drink.
We no longer hear the music
Of the mellow crystal clink.
And the colonel and the general
And the major and the judge
Meet to have a little "nip"
To give the appetite an edge.
For the egg nog now is nogless,
And the "rye" has gone awry,
And the punch bowl holds carnations.
And the south is going dry.

Ralph H. Holland responded for North Carolina, Bruce L. Rice for Tennessee and William A. Barber for South Carolina.

CAMPAIGN YEAR
AND
THE YEAR 1908 WILL MAKE GREAT HISTORY
Probably no year since the Civil War has as great influence upon the United States as the coming year. The Presidential contest, both for nomination and election, involves much more than mere party rivalry. It involves the approval or rejection of the great economic reforms which mark the beginning of a new epoch in American history. It is a fight affecting every man, woman and child, and upon which the interest of the whole world is focused.

If You Get a Wireless From Your Tooth

Remember Nyal's Toothache Plugs stop toothache instantly, also obviate it by filling the cavities, excluding food, etc., which accumulates, decomposes, forms an acid and facilitates decay. They temporarily FILL and PRESERVE the teeth prior to the insertion of permanent fillings. Can be inserted with toothpick and remove when desired, but unlike so-called toothache gums and waxes, they do not melt, come out, mix with the food and upset stomach. Superior as a toothache remedy—no burn, no blister.

Local Brevities

John Demmer is putting up a "total eclipse" in front of his cigar store.

Mrs. H. S. Carney, of West Seventh street, is suffering from a severe attack of grip.

Dr. F. M. Sparks is ill at his home in North Main street, with a severe attack of the grip.

The many cases of smallpox in Fountaintown are now under control and the scare is about over.

O. H. & D. passenger train No. 31 was late this morning on account of snow in the northwest.

Wm. McCafferty, the Daily Republican "make-up" man, has moved his family from Hope to First street.

Miss Hattie Carney, who has been quite ill at her home in West Seventh street, with tonsillitis, is convalescing.

Edward, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. John Meredith, of North Harrison street, is suffering with jaundice.

Howard and Lovel, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Maury, of Belmont, have the measles.

Rural mail carriers report the wheat crop looking fairly well. The wheat which had a good start has not been injured to a great extent.

Greenfield Tribune: Carey Walton returned Tuesday from Rushville, where he has been for ten days on business and visiting his parents.

S. E. Clifton has received a pig as a premium from the Indiana Farmer for getting a large number of subscribers for that periodical.

John Stewart, of North Sexton street, who underwent an operation, recently, is reported not so well.

A robin was seen this morning, coming with the snow flurries. What do you know about a robin being here in this sort of weather?

Edwin Farrer, Grand Instructor of the Odd Fellows of Indiana, and J. T. Arbuckle, of this city, will assist in dedicating the new Grand Lodge building on East Market street, at Indianapolis.

The Daily Republican is always pleased to publish free of charge, any item of news. We ought to have a column of society news every evening. Phone us a word or two about that party or gathering you intend to have in a few days.

A call for the Republican joint senatorial convention, to nominate a candidate for joint senator of Rush, Hancock and Fayette counties has been issued by the chairmen of the respective counties. It has been thought advisable and time-saving by holding this convention at Shelbyville on the same day as the congressional convention, on April 9th.

By a misunderstanding in receiving a telephoned item to the Republican yesterday concerning the condition of Clark Maines, who is at Colorado Springs, we stated that his condition was somewhat improved, but it was feared he would not recover; when it should have read, it is thought he will fully recover. The young man was able to attend church last Sunday.

All the evidence in the case of Fremont Clifford, of Connorsville, against the city of Richmond, was submitted yesterday in the trial at Greenfield. The case is being heard by Judge Robinson, of Spencer. There is no jury in this trial and the court will make a special finding on the facts of the case. The suit grew out of Clifford being instrumental in collecting $18,000 back taxes. Douglas Morris, of this city, is appearing for Clifford.

Life Not Worth Living

Don't say life is not worth living. Take Sexine Pills and then when you feel the new life coursing through your veins you will feel a new interest in living. Sexine Pills are sold by Hargrove & Mullin, Rushville. This is the store that sells all the principal remedies and does not substitute. Price $1.00 a box; six boxes $5.00. Full guarantee.

Mrs. Tom B. Aver, of New Salem, is quite ill.

Harrie Jones received another fast horse from Carrollton, Illinois, last night.

Mrs. Sylvester Colvin, of New Salem, is very low, suffering with cancer of the liver.

Elder O. W. Radcliff, of Wadesville, Ind., is expected to preach at the Morgan Street Baptist church Friday evening, Feb. 28th. All are invited.

Judge Will M. Sparks and wife, of North Main street, were guests at a banquet given by the lawyers of Shelby county at the hotel Ray in Shelbyville last night.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cooning entertained the Nonpareil club at their home in North Sexton street last night at euchre. Mr. Arch Black and Mrs. Michael Coyne won the honors.

A woman living in West Ninth street says the way to make hens lay is to advertise them for sale in the Want Ad department of the Daily Republican. It scares them, and they go to work fearing death. The boy will collect later.

New Castle Courier: "The Yankee Doodle Boy" company arrived this (Wednesday) morning from Elwood. The people are a nice looking lot and a car of scenery and effects is carried. The show was at Anderson Saturday afternoon and night, and Manager Hennings of the Grand says that it is first class and very entertaining.

W. D. Wattles, a socialist of Marion, Indiana, will speak at the court house Sunday afternoon. People have their fill of such stuff and only in cities like New York and Chicago, in the foreign quarters, does Socialism get a hearing any more, for they rehash the same old dry subject and intelligent people do not care to waste their time listening to it.

Now for the Ohio river on the I. & C. via Greensburg. The Civil Engineer publication says: V. R. Coon and other promoters of Louisville, Ky., it is stated, propose constructing an electric railway from Greensburg to Madison via Osgood, Napoleon and Versailles.

Secret of Knowing How to Make Good Extracts

Lemon
and Vanilla

The process thru which our extracts are made, is a secret to a great many people, because they buy any old thing and never stop to think as to how it is made.

Take our VANILLA Extract which we made from the bean, which we buy for our own use. This extract goes thru a process of careful handling which takes one year. When it is finished it is a perfect extract of Vanilla.

Our Vanilla is 100 an ounce, Lemon 50.
